GMA to stay put, wait for SC ruling

By Cynthia D. Balana

FORMER President and now Pampanga Rep. Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo will wait for the outcome of today's special Supreme Court en banc session before making another attempt to leave the country, according to her spokesperson Elena Bautista-Horn.

Arroyo herself decided against leaving yesterday despite an alleged 12:15 p.m. appointment with an endocrinologist in Singapore so she could rest more as her elevated blood pressure had not stabilized, Horn told the Inquirer.

Horn said Arroyo was administered intravenous fluids yesterday at St. Luke's Medical Center in Taguig City, where she would likely await the action of the high court on the Aquino government's decision stopping her and her husband, Jose Miguel "Mike" Arroyo, from traveling abroad.

"Hopefully, the former President can leave tomorrow (Fri-

Robredo: Who'll cops obey, court or Palace?

By Christine O. Avendaño

WHO WILL the police follow in the event that the Supreme Court calls on them to help implement its temporary restraining order (TRO) on the inclusion of former President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo and her husband in the watch list of the immigration bureau?

"The positions [of the executive and judicial branches on the issue of Arroyo's plan to travel abroad] are not the same, so [it is important] to make sure there will be no chaos," said Interior Secretary Jesse Robredo, who was among the Cabinet members who saw off President Aquino yesterday at Villamor Air Base in Pasay City. The President is attending the 19th Asean summit in Indonesia for the next three days but his instructions to the Cabinet is to maintain the peace. His prede-

GMA's pleas political, not human rights issue

IT WOULD be the supreme irony to allow GMA to invoke our most sacred human rights protections to escape justice. That would be her supreme, final perversion of our democratic institutions. While countless voters have correctly spurned human rights law, our democracy must recognize GMA's pleas as a political, not human rights, issue.

Our Bill of Rights is our democracy's greatest triumph. It is "counter-majoritarian"; it empowers the weakest member of our society to stand against the most powerful members. Wind and sunshine may enter the humblest hovel, but the king must first knock at the door.

The Bill of Rights is applied by the courts with very strict

HIS BALLS are definitely on fire.

Shortly after he vowed to have himself castrated should his client, former First Gentleman Jose Miguel "Mike" Arroyo, fail to return home, lawyer Ferdinand Topacio's offer became the hot topic in various social networking sites.

The hashtag #itlognitopacio had been trending in the local topic of microblogging site Twitter since Wednesday, generating thousands of different reactions from Filipino users worldwide.

TRO issue moot if raps vs GMA filed

By Marlon Ramos and Christian V. Esguerra

HAVING locked horns with Malacañang yet again, the Supreme Court holds a special full-court session today to deliberate on various petitions concerning the question of whether former President and now Pampanga Rep. Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo should be allowed to leave the country.

But the temporary restraining order (TRO) issued by the high court could become moot.

Inquirer sources said the Commission on Elections (Comelec) might file a case of electoral fraud against Arroyo today.

In an informal press conference at the lobby of St. Luke's Medical Center in Taguig City, Arroyo spokesperson Elena Bautista-Horn also said they had

Review of PH-US defense pact sought

By Cathy C. Yamsuan

APPARENTLY skeptical of US Secretary of State Hillary Clinton's declaration that the United States would "remain in the corner of the Philippines," senators yesterday said they would review two accords with the United States relating to national security.

"They (US officials) have made these kinds of pronouncements in the past," said Senate President Juan Ponce Enrile.

Enrile recalled that in his 17 years stint as defense minister, "whenever we have a security problem and we try to call upon the US to help us, a lot of arguments are raised."

Senators said the 60-year-old 1951 Mutual Defense Treaty (MDT) needed to be reviewed and updated, as well as the 12-year-old Visiting Forces Agreement (VFA), as they were lopsided in favor of the US.

No automatic assistance

In case the Philippines faces an imminent threat from a third country, it cannot expect "automatic assistance" from the US since the MDT does not call for it, Enrile said.

ENRILE

Sen. Joker Arroyo said "if there is an attack on Philippine territory" the MDT does not require a quick response from the US.

He noted that the treaty requires that the US follow constitutional processes before it can respond.

"It says that there has to be a declaration of war, then (the US) Congress has to concur. That's how it works," he said.

By contrast, Arroyo said, a similar defense pact signed by members of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (Nato) carries an "automatic retaliation" provision.

"Under the Nato, an attack on one member country is considered an attack on Nato itself and therefore the US must respond," he noted.

Not clear

Sen. Gregorio Honasan, the vice chair of the defense committee, complained that while the US is "obliged to support" the Philippines in case of an attack, "exactly what kind of support it would be, how soon we can expect it and even how much" is not clear.

He also said the VFA between the two countries clearly favors the US only.

"American forces have been visiting us for 10 years now. The agreement is not clear, can [our forces] also visit them?" he said.

Arroyo said the Philippines and the US have a "rich man-poor man" relationship.

"We don't want to offend the Americans but how much do we get from (every year)? It's a pittance compared to (what) other countries (give us)," he said.

Can't be amended

Sen. Loren Legarda, the foreign relations committee chair, said the MDT cannot be amended but a supplemental agreement could be attached to update it.

She said hearings could start early next year to assess "what are the potential flash points in our region, what are the security threats, if any, and what kind of assistance have we [received] in the long span of the enforcement of the MDT."

She said the MDT can be reviewed, assessed and updated, not necessarily abolished.

"We don't want to cut relations with any country be it small, big, powerful or not," she said.

The MDT also needed tweaking, she said, as national security "should go beyond defense and military cooperation. It should also include climate change, environmental and economic diplomacy."

Honasan said the Philippines may need to start with an upgrade and amendment of its own national security policy.

"Our National Defense Act is even older at 70 years old. It did not consider the concept of terrorism at that time. It needs to adapt to the new security environment," he noted.

10 terror suspects nabbed in Malaysia

KUALA LUMPUR—Malaysia has detained more than 10 men suspected to be involved in an Indonesia-based militant group smuggling weapons from the Philippines, reports said Thursday.

The men, including Indonesians and Filipinos, were arrested under the Internal Security Act (ISA), which allows detention without trial, this week, the New Straits Times and The Star reported.

They were arrested in Sabah state on Borneo island, where they were allegedly gathering weapons from the Philippines, the Times said.

They are suspected to be linked to Abu Umar's group, based in Kalimantan, the Indonesian part of the island, it said.

Umar was arrested in July in Indonesia and is accused of planning an attack on the Singapore Embassy in Jakarta.

The daily said the group was recruiting locals and sending them for militant training in neighbouring countries.

A police official confirmed the arrests but could not give any further details. Police are expected to make an official announcement later Thursday.

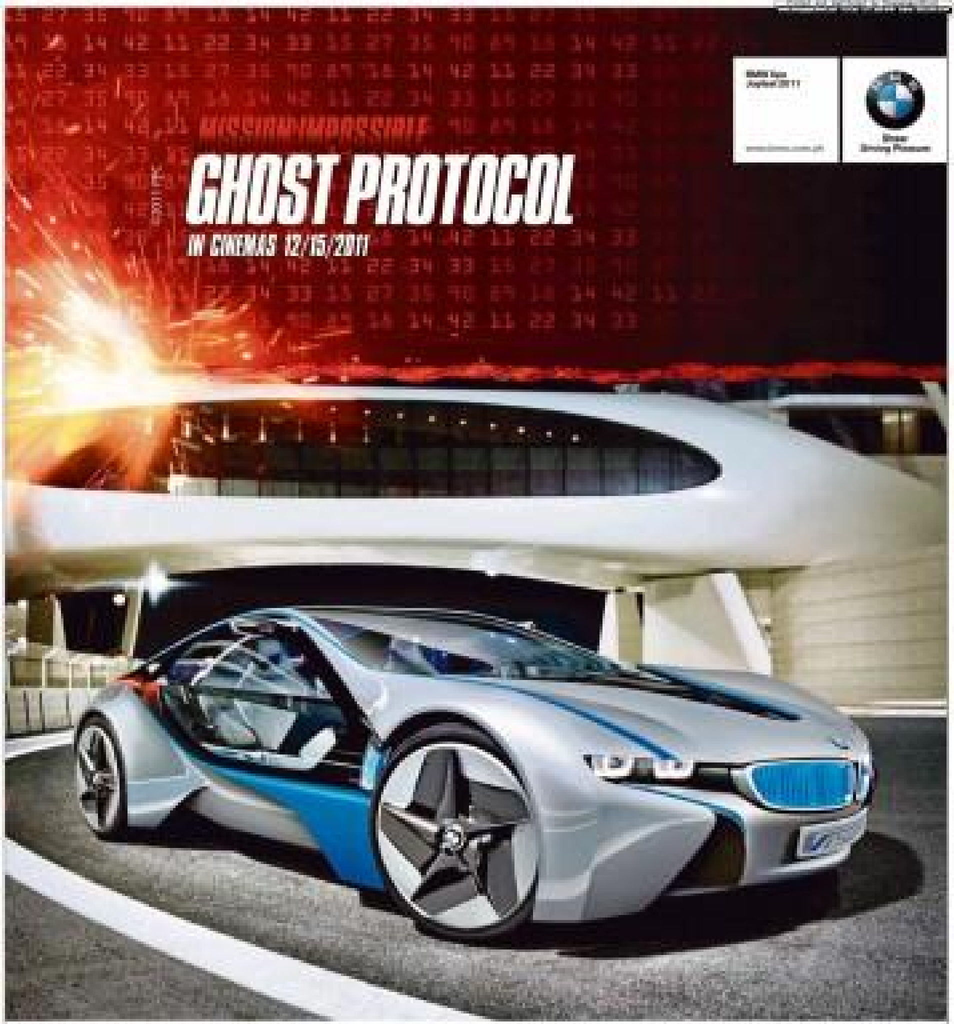

Malaysian Prime Minister Najib Razak said in September that he would abolish the ISA.

'Hot money' inflow still up in 1st 10 months

But risk aversion reportedly took its toll in October

By Michelle V. Remo

THERE was an increase in the net inflow of foreign portfolio investments to the Philippines in the first 10 months, as investors earlier this year showed strong appetite for stocks and bonds from emerging economies.

The net inflow in the 10 months to October reached $3.445 billion—up by 37 percent from the $2.509 billion registered in the same period last year.

However, the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas reported that the flow of foreign "hot money" to the country dropped in October from that of a year ago as the prolonged crisis in Europe dampened the outlook of fund managers on the global economy.

The BSP said that the drop in the flow of foreign portfolio investments last month was not peculiar to the Philippines, as other emerging markets had also been affected by investors' growing risk aversion for securities from emerging markets.

The net inflow of hot money to the country settled at $227.44 million in October, down by 78 percent from the $1.089 billion reported in the same month last year, the central bank yesterday said.

What's up with 1,000+ Facebook friends?

15-year-old questions the validity of having a huge 'friend list'

By Abigail Paraguas
Student contributor
E. Rodriguez Jr. High School

OBSERVE what's happening on Facebook. Most people I know keep adding to their "friend list," most of whom are people they don't know much.

I asked a friend why her "friend list" is huge, (1,000+). She said she kept accepting as friends people she didn't know. Why? Some people are just hooked on adding friends, the more the better.

Which would you rather have, hundreds of contacts on Facebook to make you look cool and awesome, or a few true friends on your list? True friends you really know, who can encourage you to be a better person?

Many teens nowadays tend to make friends through social-networking sites. It has become very simple and easy, as they can have online friends from different countries. Social networking definitely transformed how we communicate with the world, even allowing us to reach relatives based in distant lands.

But there is always a danger in making friends online. People on the Internet can hide their true identity, pretending to be nice. They say there are many Facebook crimes, the youth being easy targets for bad people.

Consider this analogy: If you owned a brand-new car, will you let just anyone inside? Similarly, if your parents allow you to have a social-networking account, you face a similar decision with regard to whom you will invite—or accept—as a friend.

QUITE A JOURNEY: Eugene Domingo, from the "Septic Tank" to Hollywood.

DID YOU KNOW...

JAMES Cameron's "Titanic," first released in 1997 (starring Leo DiCaprio and Kate Winslet), returns to Philippine cinemas on April 7, 2012. From 20th Century Fox, Paramount Pictures and Lightstorm Entertainment, the second highest-grossing movie of all time will be available in 3D and 2D digital versions to be distributed by Warner Bros. The "Titanic 3D" trailer was released on 20th Century Fox (Philippines) Facebook page and www.ClickTheCity.com last Wednesday.

LOS ANGELES—Ever since we watched "The Woman in the (Ang Babae Sa) Septic Tank," director Marlon Rivera and writer Chris Martinez's smart Philippine entry to the Oscars and Golden Globe best foreign film races, the running joke in our household has been lead star Eugene Domingo's question: [illegible]

We came up with [illegible] of her three acting style [illegible] "TV Patrol." You have to see the film so you can savor this scene and Eugene's comic genius.

When "Septic Tank" had its official screening for Golden Globe consideration last Monday evening at the Sunset Screening Room, we didn't pass up the chance to watch the film again.

The second viewing reaffirmed our initial reaction that "Septic Tank" is the most appealing, enjoyable entry the Philippines has fielded in recent years.

Eugene and producer [illegible] graced the screening. More on them later in this column.

Satirizing Pinoy indies

"Septic Tank" benefits greatly from Chris' [illegible] script which satirizes the type of Filipino indie films, [illegible] by Western film festivals, that [illegible] the poverty and squalor in Manila's slums. [illegible]

Chris' dialogue is [illegible], especially in the exchange between director Rainier (Kean Cipriano) and producer Bingbong (JM de Guzman), as they plot to make "Walang Wala (With Nothing)," the [illegible] movie, [illegible]. "The [illegible] the better!" Rainier suggests to Bingbong.
